

ABDUCTS WIFE AT POINT OF GUN

Mokena Man Threatens To Kill Wife and Sister's Family; Arrested at Tinley Park

Adopting cave man tactics to force his wife to live with him after she had started a suit of divorce against him, Henry Martenson of Mokena forcibly abducted his wife at the point of a 32 caliber revolver from the home of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Creight at 405 Wheeler Ave., Joliet Thursday morning. Martenson appeared at the Creight home about 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning and flourishing a revolver he then forced his wife to get into his auto and go with him. He threatened to kill the Creight family if they interfered with him. He then drove toward Mokena. Mr. Creight at once went to the sheriff's office and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Martenson on the charge of making threats to kill.

On the way to Mokena he is said to have threatened to kill his wife if she did not return to live with him. Arriving at Mokena he proceeded to the farm of Mrs. Mary Marti, mother of Mrs. Martenson. When Mrs. Martenson became hysterical Martenson jumped in his car and headed toward Tinley Park. Before leaving he threw the revolver he was carrying under a barn where it was later found and turned over to the authorities.

Deputy Stanley Kauslauskis of the Will County sheriff's office followed Martenson and placed him under arrest at Tinley Park and returned him to the county jail at Joliet and he will appear for trial in the court of Justice Obstinick Saturday of this week. Martenson is said to have purchased the revolver at Blue Island Wednesday night.

Not knowing that the Will County authorities were already on the trail of her cave man husband, Mrs. Martenson also swore out a warrant in the office of Judge John F. Schultz at Mokena for the arrest of her husband on the charge of making threats to kill her.

Martenson has been in the toils of the law before. Several years ago he was arrested for running a moon shine still at Mokena and in addition was fined for abusing his wife at that time.

Mrs. Jacob Shatley Granted Divorce

Mokena is getting to be a rival of Reno, Nevada when it comes to divorces. The latest bonds of wedlock to be dissolved by court decree were those of Jacob Shatley of Mokena. In her bill for divorce, his wife now residing at Joliet claimed that her husband willfully deserted her March 1, 1921 and that for more than two years he has continued this desertion and on these grounds she applied for an absolute divorce which was duly granted by Judge Hill of the Will County Circuit Court. Mrs. Shatley asked that the name of Anna C. Welch be restored to her which request was granted by Judge Hill. A summons has been issued to Shatley to pay all court costs.

At present Shatley who is a veteran railroad man, is employed by the Rock Island railroad.

Put Fire Escapes On Tinley School

The Tinley Park public school has been given an additional fire protection by way of new fire escapes now being installed.

Threatens To Kill Wife; She Files A Bill for Divorce

Mrs. Gladys Louisa Martenson of Mokena filed a bill for divorce the past week in the Will County Circuit court against her husband, Henry Martenson charging extreme and repeated cruelty.

The bill sets forth that the couple were married in Joliet, April 14, 1917 and that Mrs. Martenson left her husband January 6 this year, when she claims he threatened to kill her on sight.

Mrs. Martenson further sets forth in her bill that her husband struck her on the arm with his fist on Sept. 20, 1925, the blow causing her arm to be swollen so bad that she could not use it for several weeks. On Nov. 5, 1925 the bill states he hit her again and on December 21, 1925 he struck her in the eye with his hand. On December 27th he twisted her wrist causing her much pain. On Jan. 6, this year there was another violent outburst during which Mrs. Martenson charges her husband said he would kill her on sight and fearing he might carry out this threat, she went home to her mother, Mrs. Mary Marti where she is staying at present. Mrs. Martenson also declares in her bill that her husband is very quarrelsome, and that for two years almost daily he quarreled with her without provocation on her part and that he called her vile and profane names. As a result of these marital difficulties Mrs. Martenson claims her health has become impaired. There are no children.

Mrs. Martenson has asked the court to issue an injunction restraining her husband from selling, assigning or encumbering the real and personal property in Mokena and also to restraining him from coming home where Mrs. Martenson lives or in any way molesting or interfering with her, and that upon the final hearing said injunction be made permanent. The case will come up in the March term of court. Mrs. Martenson is represented by Oscar R. Laraway.

Fail to Report Scarlet Fever Cases

New Lenox has been having a run of scarlet fever and mumps said to have been due to violation of the quarantine regulations. Supervisor Fred Francis was advised that in one family there were six cases of scarlet fever resulting in one death. Mr. Francis was informed that the mother had the disease first but had no doctor and had reached the peeling stage of the disease when the children were taken down. Mr. Francis has found that no doctor was called in many instances and that those ill with the disease have been mingling freely with the rest of the community, thus exposing many persons to the disease. Even the doctors who have been called in on some of the cases have failed to report them to the health authorities. As a matter of precaution the New Lenox town board of health ordered the New Lenox village school to close for a week, but as no new cases developed the school re-opened Monday morning and the same afternoon the Will County Health Nurse visited the local school and when she sought to examine several of the pupils they refused to submit to an examination and were thereupon sent home by the nurse. This action caused a flare-up and the next day the order was rescinded it is said.

What Is New In Tinley Park? Well Just Read On

Well sir, the first big thing we are going to tell you about is the big annual prize masquerade which the valiant fire laddies of the village are going to hold at the Saenger hall in Tinley Park on Saturday night of this week. You know this is one of the big occasions of the year and it means a full house. There will be all kinds of masks for rent at the hall. Be sure and doll up real funny and cop one of the many excellent prizes which are being offered. There will be some real music to be sure and one real swell time for everyone and we don't mean maybe either. Remember the time and place and be here Saturday night for the time of your young or old life.

Well now that we got that off our chest as they say, we want to put you up to another regular stem winder of an affair scheduled for Jan. 30th at the Saenger Hall. Well what do you think it is? Guess—why a bell hop of course, at least so the genial proprietors of the Saenger hall messrs. Lorenz and Rein tell us. Now to be a little more explicit as you would say, this is going to be a bell novelty dance. Each dancer will get a real honest to goodness miniature bell that will really tinkle, in place of the regulation dance ticket. These bells can be fastened in a coat lapel and will be a well worth while souvenir. Miller's peppy Jazz Orchestra will furnish the music. Tell your girl every one gets a real bell and ask her to dance with you at the bell novelty dance Jan. 30.

The Bremen State Bank held its annual stock holders meeting last Saturday. The old officers were elected as follows: President, Fred Henke, vice president, George Schreiber, cashier John C. Andres, assistant cashier, Mrs. Elizabeth Harding. A six per cent dividend was declared. The only eventful thing in the year's banking business was the daylight holdup and robbery of the bank last November. No trace has ever been found of the bandits and probably never will be.

The janitorship of the new Tinley Park public school has been quite a problem for the school board as no one seemed to be in the field for it since Mr. Mancke was forced to give up the job on account of ill health. At last the vacancy has been filled by George Schoeneck who has been clerking at the J. C. Funk store Mr. Schoeneck taking over the new job Wednesday.

The Tinley Park Parent Teachers Association held their monthly meeting last week.

Mrs. George Boldt suffered a very painful accident one day this week. She was helping her son Henry moving a radiator when she got her finger caught and badly squeezed.

Miss Huerta Buddenhagen is on the sick list.

John Uthe who has been ill has recovered.

Philip Zumahlen, aged 86 years, an old resident of Coopers Grove, died Monday following a brief illness. The funeral services are to be held Friday afternoon at the Coopers Grove Lutheran church.

Tinley Park has been quite a grain center the past week. Farmers have been busy shelling and hauling corn to the local elevator.

Mrs. Fred Schmediknecht was hostess to the bunco club last Wednesday.

Friday of this week the club will meet with Mrs. Henry Hick and incidentally celebrate her birthday.

Wm. Boppell who has been chef at the Lorenz & Rein restaurant has returned to Chicago and a new chef from Blue Island is now in charge.

David H. Law is down in Sarasota Florida and writes it is pretty warm down there. On January 11 the thermometer was 88 degrees.

Wm. Funk Sells Undertaking Bus.

William Funk of Tinley Park who has been engaged in the undertaking business has sold out his business to Mr. Carlson of Pullman for a reported consideration of $40,000.00. Mr. Funk removed his undertaking establishment from Tinley Park to Oak Forest quite a number of years ago. Mr. Funk had charge of funerals in all the surrounding territory for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Funk will locate in Tinley Park sometime next month. It is understood that they will build a home of their own in the spring in Tinley Park.

In Loving Memory of Mr. Chas. Peters Who Died Jan. 6, 1926

Farewell, Farewell, but not forever, There will be a glorious dawn; We shall meet to part, no, never, On that resurrection morn.

Thou' thy form lies sleeping, In the cold and silent tomb; Thou shalt have a glorious waking When the blessed Lord shall come.

Farewell father, we shall miss you None your place to us can fill; We will think of you dear father Though your form is cold and still O, 'tis sad! But God will help us; None but Him our grief can tell, It is hard but help us say it "Jesus doeth all things well."

Heaven now contains our treasure Earth that lonely casket keeps, And the sunbeams love to linger Where our blessed father sleeps.

Frankfort, Ill. Otto C. Frey.

Policy Claim Is Promptly Paid

John Liess of Mokena has just received a check for $1,000 in payment of the policy held by his wife Mrs. Mary Liess in the Illinois Life Insurance Company, formerly the Court of Honor of which Mrs. Liess was a charter member. Mrs. Liess died December 28. Mr. Liess greatly appreciates the very prompt settlement of the claim.

Matilda Erickson Dies Aged 80 Years

Mrs. Matilda Erickson, aged 80 years, a resident of New Lenox township for many years, died Tuesday noon at the home of her nephew Byron Nelson. Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon from the late home with burial in the Maplewood cemetery New Lenox, Rev. Mr. Galloway of the M. E. church of New Lenox officiating.

OAK LAWN HAS MANY NEWS ITEMS

Miss Vera Riek who has been in the German Deaconess hospital for the last week is improving with rapid strides. She is now able to have all the visitors that can possibly get in her room at one time. We are all glad to hear this.

Miss Reba Elvidge came home from work Friday afternoon and has been confined to bed ever since but expects to be back to work the latter part of this week. Miss Elvidge has also been visited with the gripe epidemic that has been making it's rounds. Master Robert Exter is also ill with the grip and Baby John Rowan is also ill. So beware folks of old Mr. Grippe so he does not visit you.

Rev. Mr. Brockhaus who was recently by a Wabash freight at the crossing near the depot, is improving nicely. It was said that he was only bruised rather badly instead of having any bones broken. We are sure glad to hear this and hope that the Reverend will soon be able to be about again.

Mrs. Harry Kistler was taken to the German Deaconess hospital on Tuesday, January 4th and was operated on by Dr. Percy Hopkins. Mrs. Kistler has been critically ill, but is recovering about as well as can be expected. Only members of the family have been allowed to see her, but it is hoped that by the first of next week she will be able to receive all her friends.

On Thursday and Friday of this week the Oak Lawn Community Club house will be left open and everyone has been asked to bring all their old newspapers and they will be sold for the purpose of buying new table linen, etc. The Community has been asked to take care of a great number of guests for dinner where they could only take care of a limit number at one time. If you are unable to get your papers over on either of these days a little later will do as papers are able to be sold at most any time.

On Friday afternoon, Jan. 8 the P. T. A., of the Oak Lawn public school held the first meeting of the new year. Mrs. Utt opened the meeting and Mrs. Kraton's room and Miss Skinner's room entertained with little musical numbers. Then the usual business was taken up and discussed. After the meeting the members went downstairs and had dainty refreshments.

The Boys and Girls of Oak Lawn are very lucky in having a lake to skate on. After school hours and Saturdays and Sundays the Oak Lawn Lake is crowded with children. Now all the grownups should come out to this occasion and have a good time just as well as the little folks. The Oak Lawn Fire Department flooded the lake some time ago and the cold spell came and it froze solid so no one need fear that they might fall in and get wet. We are unable to enjoy the lake during the spring and summer except for the scenery so why not make use of it during the winter months.

The Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce held their meeting in the headquarters on Thursday evening, January 14. The men discussed the usual business and are planning some more entertainments for Oak Lawn in the near future. The Chamber of Commerce is surely to be praised and really no words can express the things that the Chamber of Commerce has done for Oak Lawn and in putting this town on the map.

A Baby Contest was held at the Oak Lawn Welfare Station Tuesday Jan. 12 from 1 to 3:30 p. m. Dr. Earl Pronger of Blue Island and Miss O'Connor the Township Nurse were the judges. The prize winning babies will be announced next week.

OAK LAWN PUBLIC SCHOOL. The P. T. A., held their monthly meeting last Friday afternoon in the school auditorium. A large membership was present and an interesting program was rendered. The little girls from grade 1 sang a dolly lullaby. Miss Skinner's room gave a rhythmic number with their own letters. Miss Bernice Emery took care of a great number of guests for dinner where they could only take care of a limit number at one time. If you are unable to get your papers over on either of these days a little later will do as papers are able to be sold at most any time.

A bunco and 500 party was held Wednesday evening by the P. T. A. Teachers and pupils appreciate the good work done by the mothers of the P. T. A. Our lunch room has been made attractive with white curtains and clean floor. The welfare room also has been taken care of much to the delight of the nurse, Miss O'Connor.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DEMENTIA PRAECOX

ALMOST every morning, when you open your paper, you see an account of some crime committed by some boy or young man. Sometimes it isn't an actual crime, but some senseless prank or unnecessary piece of mischief. Often it is so unreasonable and foolish that you immediately recognize that it must have been committed by a person of unsound mind.

Later on, if you follow the case in the newspaper, you find that when the boy went to trial the defense submitted by the lawyers is insanity and that the experts testify that the defendant is a victim of dementia praecox. What is it and what causes it?

Dementia praecox is a Latin term which means "insanity of the young." Of course, anybody knows that. But why does insanity in the young occur and why does it take this form?

There are four general classes of insanity. There is what is called senile dementia, or the loss of mental powers due to old age; there is insanity caused by degeneration of the brain itself, or what is popularly called softening of the brain, due generally, probably always, to specific infection; there is melancholia or manic-depressive insanity and there is dementia praecox.

The proportion of these four forms is always about the same. Senile dementia forms about one-tenth of all cases. There is no treatment. The victims live about four years after they are committed. The manic-depressive patients form another tenth. They can only be helped by treating the infection. The melancholics form three-fifths. Many of them recover; in some institutions, over one-half.

The dementia praecox patients form the remaining fifth. But here is the sad fact. They do not recover; there is no treatment and apparently their general health is not affected. So they stay in the asylums for years with no hope of improvement. Generally they develop tuberculosis from long confinement in the hospital. Nearly 52 per cent die of this disease. Only about one patient out of a thousand ever recovers and even in these rare cases a relapse is probable.

In New York, out of 40,000 patients in the state insane hospitals, there were 24,070 dementia praecox patients of an average age of sixteen. Of 40,000 insane in hospitals in the United States, there are 240,000 dementia praecox patients. Although they form only one-fifth of the commitments they furnish over one-half of the inmates. Why? Because the other insane patients die or get well. The dementia praecox patients live but they never recover.

PREVENTING INSANITY

THE importance of the state taking such steps as may be necessary to protect public health is becoming more obvious every year. Practically all our public health legislation has been passed in the last fifty years. Before that time, there was no state public health work and there were no health laws, because no one knew the causes of any of the contagious diseases and consequently no one knew of anything the state could do to protect its people from disease.

In the last half century, much has been done for better health and the amount of preventable sickness has been very greatly reduced. But only a few of our state health departments have as yet realized the importance of preventing mental diseases. Probably one reason for this is that few people realize that mental conditions are largely dependent on physical conditions and instead of the mind ruling the body, as some of our later day cults teach, the fact is that the condition of the body, to a very large extent, determines the condition of the mind.

So we are beginning to realize now that many mental conditions arise from physical conditions that are controllable and preventable and that many of these mental conditions can be checked or entirely removed in their early stages, which, if allowed to go on, may become serious and incurable mental afflictions.

In a number of states societies for the promotion of mental hygiene have been formed, to prevent, as far as possible, the development of insanity. This work includes talks on mental conditions before schools, women's clubs and local organizations, pamphlets and articles on mental conditions. Some day, as knowledge on this subject grows, the strange or unusual child, the odd eccentric person, the confused and harassed man or woman who realizes that there is something wrong with their minds, will voluntarily or at the suggestion of their friends go to the hospital for mental diseases for treatment and care, just as the patient of today, suffering from typhoid fever, pneumonia or tuberculosis applies for admission to a hospital because he knows that there he will get the best possible care.

The old idea was that the insane person was possessed of a devil. Today, the idea is far too prevalent that there is something disgraceful about an abnormal mental condition. Both ideas are incorrect. Mental conditions are dependent on body conditions which can often be prevented or cured.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S
TRAFFIC TALKS

TAKE NO CHANCES

Never turn a corner at a high rate of speed.
Never turn around abruptly.
Never unexpectedly change your course.
To do any of these things while driving a motor car may result in an accident.
Learn to drive in a straight line always. If you must change your course make clear with hand signals what you intend to do.
In turning a corner you may be running through a stream of pedestrians who have been given the signal by the traffic officer to cross.
Pedestrians should be allowed to cross before motor travel is permitted to turn through the line of March of the pedestrians.

In crossing bridges take extra care. Don't cross a railroad track until you are absolutely safe.
If you have a horn that emits a faint squeak get it fixed or buy a new one.
If you have a horn that is very loud be reasonable in its use. Horns are for protection, not to frighten people.
Give heed to signs. Read them as you motor along and then observe them. It pays.
Respect "dummy" policemen.
Know the law in your community and state and observe it.
And always be careful.
That means: Never take chances.

ORLAND M. E. CHURCH

Friday evening, Jan. 22nd the moving picture will be "The Girl I Loved", featuring Chas. Ray.

Sunday Jan. 24th. Bible School at 9:30 a. m. Classes for all ages beginning with the primary and up thru to the Senior class and the Adult Bible Class. You are cordially invited to find "your niche" in our church school if you are not going elsewhere and live in the Orland community.

Morning worship at 10:30 It is the aim of every morning service to give to us all something that we can not get anywhere else—in other words "the bread of life". We must cultivate the soul—or perish—even in times of modern civilization. The Master has well said "What doth it profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses his soul?"

Sunday evening a two reel story film entitled "The Golden Circle" and the sermon is termed "Wedding Rings and Wedding Bells". Service at 7:30. Public is cordially invited.

Sunday evening, Jan. 31 a Bible dramatization in moving pictures entitled "The Lord Will Provide".

Special notice. At the morning service on Sunday morning, Jan. 24 there will be special music rendered by Professor Curtis and Miss Helen Briggs.

On Sunday afternoon, Jan. 10th there was held a delegated Inter-community Church Conference at the Orland M. E. church. Delegates from the Community Church at Worth and the Palos Park Presbyterian church were in attendance, and also the pastor from Palos Park. It was decided at this conference to hold Inter-community Bible Teachers Training Conference for Sunday School workers beginning on Tuesday evening, May 4th at the Orland M. E. church and continuing for a period of six weeks. It is planned to hold two sessions of the school in the three communities which participate. The pastor of the Palos Park church will be the Dean of the school. The next conference pertaining to this school will be held at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31st at the Palos Park Presbyterian church. A baseball league of the inter-community type, interchange of pulpits, inter-community socials, and an inter-community Training Conference and encampment at Lake Geneva will also be discussed in the near future.

The pastor of the Orland M. E. church announced publicly last Sunday, Illinois.

FRANKFORT

The funeral of the late Chas. Peters was held Sunday afternoon from the home to St. Peter Evangelical church, Rev. Gaebe of Monee and Rev. Frey of Green Garden officiating, burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Mr. Peters was born May 14, 1855 in Germany. He was united in marriage to Miss Zarnitz in 1884. To this union were born 4 children.

In 1908 Mrs. Peters died, after which Mr. Peters and children moved to North Dakota, and returned again to Frankfort in a few years.

Those surviving him are: one daughter, Martha of Frankfort, 3 sons, Chas. of Frankfort and John and Wm. of Minot, N. Dakota, 2 grand children and one sister in Germany and many other relatives and a host of friends.

The Milkmen of this community held a meeting in Frankfort hall on Saturday night.

Vernon, 4 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobzin is ill with Chicken Pox.

A farewell party was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Hossbach last Saturday evening, by relatives and friends. About 75 were present. Dancing was enjoyed after which refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Hossbach will move to Joliet soon.

The annual meeting of the congregation of St. Peter Evangelical church was held in the church Monday afternoon. The new deacons elected were, Wm. Lankenau, John Schroeder and Oscar Christianson. The out going deacons are, Chas. Sebeer, Wm. Engleman and Wm. Breidert. There will be services in St. Peter church next Sunday afternoon, Rev. Lunthe of Peotone in charge.

Darrell Haass and Robert Klepper are ill.

Edward Geuther who has been ill with the mumps is improved.

A daughter was born Jan. 6 to Mr. and Mrs. George Mills of Oak Glen. Mrs. Mills will be remembered as Verna Fink formerly of Frankfort.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Peters and Mr. and Mrs. John Peters all of Minot, N. Dakota arrived here last Saturday to attend the funeral of their father, Chas. Peters.

Fred Woodcock of Sperling, Canada who has been visiting relatives here the last three weeks will soon leave for his home.

Mrs. Fred Hinspeter, Sr., who has been very ill with pneumonia is improving very nicely.

Chas. Jarchow was removed to Silver Cross hospital Sunday night and operated on Monday for gall stones and appendicitis, Dr. W. V. Hedges performing the operation. He is getting along as well as can be expected.

Mrs. Jerry Hossbach entertained the Pinochle Club last Thursday afternoon at her home. Cards were played at four tables. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Philip Stelwagen had the Pinochle Card Club at her home on last Wednesday evening. Cards were played at four tables. Refreshments were served at the close of the game.

The Frankfort Home Improvement Club members will entertain their families at a party in Frankfort hall January 23rd.

Lawrence Lorenzen and family of Green Garden moved in their new home last Wednesday. They purchased the property from Herbert Lambrecht sometime ago.

Mrs. John Schroeder, Sr., is spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. John Schoen in Chicago.

The new M. E. parsonage will be dedicated next Friday evening, Jan. 15 with a supper at the church parlors. District Supt. Lumsden of Dixon will also be present and will be the speaker of the evening.

There will also be a musical program and talks. A fine time is being looked forward to.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt appreciation to our many friends and relatives for sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our dearly beloved father, Chas. F. Peters. We wish to especially express our thanks to the quartet for the hymns offered, also to Rev. Mr. Gaebe and Rev. Otto C. Frey for their comforting words, also to those who donated use of cars, and for the beautiful floral offerings.

Martha, Wm. Chas. and John Peters.

MOKENA

A significant men's meeting was held last Sunday afternoon at the Methodist church. This was the result of an open invitation to the men of the community and was for the purpose of organizing a Men's Bible Class. Rev. Glen T. Beatty took the initiative of calling the meeting, however. The object is to create a strictly non-creedal, non-sectarian community study class.

Mr. Floyd Healy was made temporary chairman. The organization will be completed later and its type will depend upon the wishes of the men attending the meetings.

The first study meeting will be held at 4 o'clock next Sunday afternoon when the subject "Where did we get our Bible?" will be discussed. Also the future time and place of the meeting will be decided upon.

It is hoped that this gathering will develop into a real community enterprise and such was the opinion of all present at the first meeting. The subjects discussed will be purely unbiased. The extend of the enterprise will be limited only by the extent of co operation of the men of the community. All men are invited.

The Young Peoples' League of the St. John Evangelical church will hold a bunco party at the church parlors on Thursday evening, Jan. 21st. Everyone invited.

The Mokena Men's Club held their annual meeting January 4 Two directors were elected, namely Clifford Knudson and Arthur Benson.

The officers are as follows:
Arthur Maue, President.
Ben Young, Vice President.
Clifford Knudson, Secretary.
Lester Schiek, Treasurer.
Dance dates will be announced at a later date.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold a supper in the church parlors of the St. John Evangelical church on next Tuesday evening, January 19.

Next Sunday evening, Rev. Beatty will preach a message at the M. E. church on the anniversary of prohibition in America.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Wm. Semmler, who was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. Hugh Deadmore, Tues.

The February meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Oscar Klose, Sr.

Big minstrel show in town at the St. Mary hall Saturday night of this week. A special cast of 26 players from Chicago will be on the program so if you want to enjoy a real good time be sure and come.

Last Saturday Miss L. Darling and Mrs. Oscar Klose, Sr., took the girls of the history class in Miss Darling's room on a pleasure trip to Chicago. They visited the Field Museum and also took in a show.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Healy have both been ill, but are improving.

August Hentsch has just added a new International 2 ton truck to his trucking fleet. He has been kept busy all winter.

Mr. Kuhfeldt and family who have been living on the Cleveland farm, moved to Indiana the past week.

The Mokena Vol. Fire Department members are planning to hold a dance at St. Mary's hall the forepart of February. The object is to raise funds with which to purchase a fire siren.

The morning services at the M. E. church Sunday were very largely attended. A lady evangelist, Dorothy Dobbins Dake occupied the pulpit and gave a very interesting talk. Special vocal and instrumental music also was on the program.

Embracing Opportunity

"WHAT a bereavement!" cried Elinor gayly, as she stopped her car in Elizabeth's grounds, where the latter stood waiting. And Elinor laughed a little louder than good form would sanction.

"It's embarrassing, at least," replied Elizabeth, who had to smile to keep in the picture.

"And I suppose you don't feel exactly like giving them a wedding present!"

"Oh, I don't know. I was a bit fond of them both."

Elizabeth had phoned that morning early that her chauffeur had eloped with her maid. And so Elinor had come to take Elizabeth to the dog show, where they both had entries.

Of course Elizabeth might have called a taxi, but Elinor, being one of her dearest friends, wouldn't hear to that.

Orson, Elinor's chauffeur, was one of those in the fortunate books of the gods. He had a snap. Elinor drove her cars quite as skillfully as Orson himself could drive them, while he sat back in the tonneau with all the poise of a personage. Elizabeth could no more negotiate a motor than she could make biscuits.

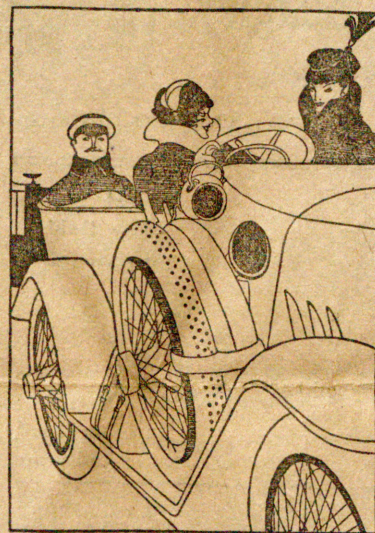

"Why," Elizabeth had once asked Elinor, "why do you keep a chauffeur and yourself do most of the work, dear?"

"Oh, I love to drive," was the answer.

"Then why take Orson along at all?"

"Isn't he rather ornamental, dear? And then it happens that he must sometimes get under the car and fix things. To do that one must be a bit acrobatic and have a lurid vocabulary. In fact, one must be a man."

Elinor was reasonably young and more than reasonably attractive. Elizabeth was not exactly old and had never been eligible for the beauty show. Yet she had much more money than Elinor. She was among the very few whose names frequently figure in connection with momentous national speculations as to the medium of circulation.

"Isn't He Rather Ornamental, Dear?"

"Did you hear what has happened to Gustave?" asked Elinor, turning companionably to Orson as Elizabeth mounted beside her.

Orson's face had already taken on something resembling a smile. Gustave had been Elizabeth's chauffeur. "Oh, yes," replied Orson. "Gustave told me about it before it happened."

"And why didn't you warn me?" asked Elizabeth, smiling at Orson candidly and almost sweetly, although she had told Elinor over the phone that she should hereafter hate chauffeurs.

"I—you see, madam—ah! It was in confidence," stammered Orson, who was plainly embarrassed. Elinor never before had dreamed that Orson could look that way.

And they went to the dog show. On the way Elinor and Elizabeth chatted and laughed as the dearest friends will chat and laugh, and Orson was ignored. That was part of Orson's business. Yet he seemed deep in thought most of the way.

Orson was missing from the garage the next morning when Elinor called for her favorite machine. He had gone the night before, one of the helpers said, and Elinor, with whom he had indulged some conversation, said she had no idea as to his whereabouts.

"Elizabeth, dear," cried Elinor over the phone a few minutes later, "what do you think? I'm almost as unlucky as you are. Orson's gone!"

"But I'm not particularly unlucky, dearest," replied Elizabeth. "I engaged Orson yesterday at the dog show."

Popular Idea About

Hoopsnake Is Wrong

The hoopsnake is a small and harmless snake of the south Atlantic states, so-called because of the notion, ascribed to the backland negroes, that it curves itself into a hoop, takes its tail into its mouth and rolls along at a merry clip. Some of the naturalists who contribute papers to the columns of the Philosopher of Folly devoted much attention a while back to the reputed habits of this creature; but despite these learned gentlemen, the hoopsnake does much of his traveling underground, burrowing deeply into the soil. He is a rather good-looking snake, with a blue-black back, marked with three red lines, and an under side of the shade called nude, dappled in black.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PART FOUR—Continued.

Darbury seethed and bubbled, and consumed endless tea, over the broken engagement of Hugh and Barbara. It is always easier to criticize other people's actions with the aid of this soothing beverage. It seems to enhance one's own sense of respectability in a world of sin.

Nobody was surprised, of course! Nobody ever is on such occasions. Everybody knew that something would happen—which is always a safe conjecture.

But what everybody did not know concerning the latter thrill was the real reason. And herein lay the cause of the emptying tea caddies. Unfortunately, Miss Davies was in London attending Christmas meeting over "fallen girls," so the mystery remained unsolved. But the weed of suspicion grew into a lusty tree. Again, and in louder tones, the question arose: What happened on the island?

It was known that the Rochdales and Mrs. Stockley were deeply upset, the latter exceedingly wroth; but the two most affected kept their own counsel.

The only ray of comfort to Barbara in her wretchedness lay in her aunt's absence. The relations between her mother and herself were of the coldest. Mrs. Stockley never forgot her position as a beacon, nor her Honorable Grandmother's gracious act in establishing her own identity with the county. This marriage between her daughter and Darbury's future squire had been her dearest ambition. Now, for no tangible reason, this ambition—revived with the girl's return—was hurled to the ground. Not easily could Mrs. Stockley view the dashing of her hopes. The scene between them had been stormy. She had wept, caajoled and upbraided, exasperated by the other's irrevocable demeanor.

"You are throwing away what many would give their eyes to possess!" she cried at last. "What will people say? There has been enough talk already. You confess you still care for Hugh!"

"Oh, yes, yes!" interrupted Barbara impatiently. "But that's not sufficient. It's not a woman's love for a man; that's quite a different thing. I know."

"Don't talk like a novelette!" her mother broke in querulously. Then, suddenly, her eyes narrowed and her thin face sharpened. "How do you know?" she asked meaningly.

Barbara was momentarily off her guard, not realizing her slip. The other woman pursued the advantage.

"Answer me, Barbara! I have not hitherto pressed for the confidence that was my due—in spite of the gossip which has come to my knowledge. You owe it to us all, now, to give an account of your life upon that island. Did anything happen there to cause this step?"

The girl stood looking down into the fire, uncertain of her reply, for a few moments. Her mother gave a little click with her lips.

"Ah!" she said decisively, "we thought so!"

"Thought what?" cried Barbara, turning sharply.

"That there had been some nonsense between you and that man, unchaperoned as you were."

The girl's eyes smoldered ominously, and she set her teeth. Her mother, exasperated by this reticence, continued with increasing anger:

"I ought never to have given my consent. I always knew he was an unscrupulous type of man—I never trusted him! But you at least should have known better, after your very careful upbringing. If his ideas were loose—"

"Stop, mother!" Her quick anger mounted. "You don't know what you are saying. He was the soul of honor. And because of it I—yes, I grew to love him with all my heart. I couldn't help it. I shall love him until I die," she cried recklessly, throwing herself into a chair and burying her head.

"You mean to say," asked Mrs. Stockley sarcastically, "that it is 'the soul of honor' to take advantage of a girl's lonely position? To lure her from the man—"

"He did not!" She sprang angrily to her feet; then realized, too late, the wisdom of Hugh's warning.

Her mother laughed incredulously. "Then you gave him your affection unasked? You behaved like a sentimental schoolgirl—threw yourself at his head, in fact?"

Anything was better than exposing Alan's name to the fate awaiting it if the truth oozed out. She caught at this straw, anxious to end the ordeal.

"If you like to think so. He certainly never—asked me to care for him. But I couldn't help it," she repeated.

Thus it was whispered from one bosom friend to another throughout Darbury that, during her sojourn upon the island, Barbara became the victim of an unrequited passion. This added spice to the mystery, while whetting curiosity. Did her companion never guess? Could any man, in such circumstances, be so blind—or so platonic?

Curious glances followed her; voices were lowered when she appeared; a constraint became obvious in her presence. . . . Well aware of it all, she threw it off with a shrug, scorn adding to the misery of her heart as she dragged through the days. Occasionally her mother forced the subject open again.

"If Hugh ever wishes to renew the engagement," she said once, "I insist upon your doing so."

"I couldn't possibly, mother!"

"Why not? The other man is dead. . . . You can't ruin your life over an infatuation of that sort. . . . The Rochdales are such old friends," she moaned, another time. "You don't consider how I miss them—how this all affects me!"

"But you can continue your friendship. Why not?" asked the girl, having grown unaccustomed to Darbury habits. This, however, was contrary to all custom; and a certain estrangement between the two families began, as a matter of course. . . .

Barbara tramped the common in all weathers, consumed with a restlessness that would not let her sleep, unable to find peace of mind in any occupation. Coming back from one of these tramps two days before Christmas, she noticed, in the gathering dusk of the short afternoon, a woman's figure standing near the lake, a small child in her arms. With a casual glance, the girl was entering the cottage gate, when she heard her name uttered low, like a faint exclamation. She turned quickly, peering with puzzled brow through the gloom; then recognition dawned in her face.

"Jenny? Jenny Grant!" She remembered she had not seen the girl since her return. "What are you doing, Jenny? Home for Christmas?" she asked kindly, presuming her to be now in service somewhere. There was no reply; and, aware of the shyness of such village maidens, she continued: "Where are you working now?"

"I—I ain't got no work, Miss Barbara."

The voice trembled on a sob. Barbara glanced at her quickly again, and realized the child's presence. A dim memory of one among the many choice morsels recently recounted for her own benefit returned to her mind. . . .

"Oh, Jenny!" she cried involuntarily; then stopped, as the girl, hiding her face on the sleeping child, burst into a passion of tears. Taking her arm, she led her to a seat placed near the lake, saying nothing until the fit of weeping had subsided. There was no need of words. In Barbara's face and heartfelt exclamation Jenny had read the knowledge she had learned to dread awakening, mingled with a sympathy she had never yet encountered. Of her own accord, at last, she began a stumbling explanation.

"How Do You Know?"

"E was a sailor, miss. . . . 'E was goin' to marry me, but was ordered sudden-look back to 'is ship; an' then 'e—'e got the 'monia an' died. . . . But 'e would 'a married me, all right! 'E would!" She spoke with a defiance which the listening girl understood well. "We was wrong, I know," she went on, "but we was young an'—an'—partin', an'," with sinking voice, "I loved 'im! Oh, miss! I did, indeed! . . ."

The hand on her arm tightened its grasp.

"Yes, Jenny. . . . I know. . . . Then for a few moments she fell silent, reflecting upon the varied and extraordinary results—the high resolves and sacrifices, the impetuous, hot-headed folly, the loss of all principles—achieved by that "terrific force." . . . "What has happened since—?" She glanced at the child. "My aunt sent you to a 'home,' I think?"

"Yes, miss. Afterward I got work; but the baby was delicate an' I couldn't 'ave 'im with me. An' it's bin the same all along. I've bin out of work now w' 'im fur weeks, an' all me money well-nigh gone. So I cum 'ome to mother, an' she—she's turned me away." . . . The sobs broke out afresh. "I—dunno w'ere to go nor w'at to do. . . . I wish I was dead! I was wonderin', there by the lake, if—"

"No, no, no! Don't say it, Jenny! We—we'll think of something." Perhaps it was more than natural aversion which forced such horror into her own face and voice. "Have you any friends, anywhere?"

"Only in Edinburgh," Jenny replied hopelessly. "I 'ave an aunt there wot would 'elp me over Christmas if I could afford to—" She broke off, swaying forward and nearly dropping the child. Barbara took him from her.

"Jenny," she asked, "have you had any food lately?"

"I ain't 'ad—none today—miss," came the whisper.

With all Alan's suddenness of purpose, Barbara rose, supporting the girl with one arm and the baby boy with the other.

"Come with me," she said.

Mrs. Stockley, making out a list of necessities for a systematically organized parish tea, presently listened aghast to her daughter's impetuous explanation and extraordinary request.

"That girl! Jenny Grant! To stay in my house? My dear Barbara, I won't hear of such a thing! Whatever would people say? A wicked little—where is she now?"

"Martha is giving her food. She was starving."

Her mother gasped. She rose uncertainly, as if on the point of frustrating this disposal of her goods; then something in the girl's expression caused her to resume her seat.

"Oh, well! She can have some food. But then she is to go, Barbara—"

"Where?"

Mrs. Stockley fidgeted with her writing paper.

"That's no concern of mine. Her mother must look after her. Your aunt will be back tonight. She will do something—"

Barbara waved this idea to a place unmentionable. "Will you lend her money to reach Edinburgh? I haven't got enough loose cash—"

"Certainly not! I might never see it again."

The girl abruptly left the room at this point, with another impulsive resolution.

Half an hour later, after extricating her charges from Martha's distinctly grim ministrations, she rang the bell at the "House of the Moor," and deposited them in the friendly arms of the housekeeper of that harbor where all were welcome. "Mrs. Field won't mind," she said. "I shall be back soon." She hurried away across the dark paths; then turned along the road leading to the vicarage.

"Surely the vicar will help," she muttered to herself. "If only I had the money handy myself—" Down the road skirting the wall, a bicycle lamp came flashing. A dark form flew past the girl; then, with a scraping of brakes and rattle of springs, jumped off and hurried back.

"Ah! Miss Stockley! I have wanted to see you. . . ."

The vicar's voice sounded unusually subdued.

"I was just coming to see you, Mr. Horne," Barbara replied.

"Really? Ah! I am very glad of that. I hoped you would."

"Why?" she inquired, in genuine surprise.

"Because—well, to be candid, I have felt much troubled about you."

"Indeed?" she said, as he paused. He wheeled his bicycle nearer and spoke somewhat hesitatingly. There was that about Barbara, nowadays, which seemed to check his bland platitudes.

"I have been genuinely pained," he continued in his pedantic manner, "at your continued refusal to take up your old work in the parish, and your absence from church. Both have been a real grief to me, as they have to your mother. I am overjoyed, therefore, if, at last—"

"No!" she interrupted. "You are mistaken. I can't do—either."

He gave a deep sigh. "But—my dear Miss Stockley—when one's duty lies plain—"

"Mr. Horne!" she interrupted again, a note of suppressed passion in her voice, "if you met a blind man, would you send him as guide to a party of tourists?"

"Er—no," he said, bewildered.

She laid her hand on his bicycle, and the passion rose in her hurried words.

"Suppose your whole life—your thoughts, your motives, tastes, ideals, faith—had been taken and changed; then whirled around and dashed to the ground, so that—so that you were broken, crushed, blind—groping in the dark—could you teach children their creed? Or train young girls to be 'guides'? Or—or—kneel in church and worship a God whom—if He exists at all—you hate?—yes, hate!"

"Miss Stockley—?"

Poor Mr. Horne was rendered speechless.

Barbara seized the opportunity of forwarding her original purpose.

"I wanted to see you, tonight, about Jenny Grant."

"Jenny Grant?" he echoed, still dazed.

In a few sentences she acquainted him with the facts. He looked at her, by the light of his bicycle lamp, in yet more astonishment; then, with an air of profound melancholy, shook his head and sighed again.

"They are chapel people, Miss Stockley. It is not my business to interfere."

"But surely—! Whatever difference does that make? It's only a loan of a few pounds—I will pay you back—"

"You don't understand these matters. If we begin lending money to those who are but suffering the rewards of their sins—if we encourage them to expect—"

Barbara turned away.

"If only Mrs. Field were here!" she muttered involuntarily.

"Mrs. Field? I saw her at the station—"

"Saw her? Then she has come back? . . . Good night, Mr. Horne!"

Before he could open his lips, he found himself alone, the sound of flying footsteps in his ears. Still feeling distinctly dazed, he took off his pince-nez and wiped the glass, before mounting his bicycle. . . . Yes, very wrong! Whatever the trouble, it was being taken in quite the wrong spirit. But one must be broadminded; one must not give up those in sin and darkness. He would send her that little book. . . .

"Oh! I Love Him So. . . ."

VI

An anchor at last, in a merciless sea!

Thus did it seem to the girl stumbling hurriedly across the dark common. The windows of the house blazed forth a pathway of welcome, long before their refuge was reached. Then a bright-faced maid opened the door; and that subtle sense of radiant warmth—which is only possessed by a house or person when the spirit of it is at the helm—stole out and enveloped her. . . . With a long-drawn sigh she entered the cheerful hall.

One swift searching glance at the sharpened white features of the girl hurrying up the stairs, and the woman in the fur traveling coat caught the extended hands and drew her close into her arms.

"Oh, Bab darling!" came the cry from her heart's depth.

A convulsive clinging of thin arms; no words were needed. . . . Here was, at last, the blessed peace of Understanding. . . .

When the door of her den was closed behind them the elder woman raised the girl's face and looked long into the sunken eyes, with those deep gray ones which bore such resemblance to another's that Barbara caught her breath. She remembered once thinking his lacked their wonderful tenderness. But she had seen it grow there—intensified. . . .

"Ah!" she cried, "how I wanted you!"

"I want to keep you here for Christmas," Mrs. Field said. "Will you stay? I am leaving afterward. Miss Davies traveled back with me, so your mother does not need you." She saw the flash of unutterable relief cross the girl's face, and turned to the door. Within a few minutes a letter had been dispatched to Mrs. Stockley, instructions given to the housekeeper, their outdoor clothes removed and they were back in the little sitting-room.

Mrs. Field knelt and poked the fire into a bright blaze, then looked up at the silent figure beside her. Her eyes followed those of the girl toward the writing table and the photograph upon it. . . . And she understood. She rose to her feet. And all the peculiar magnetism, which drew people of every class and creed to this woman, shone in her face, seemed to vibrate in the hand she held out. As the other caught at it, the sealed chamber of her tortured heart burst open in one agonized cry:

"I love him. . . . Oh! I love him so. . . ."

"And—he, Barbara?"

"He—loved me."

Barbara abruptly held out her left hand.

JESUS AND NICODEMUS

LESSON TEXT—John 3:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Nicodemus Visits Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Ruler Visits Jesus by Night.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Nicodemus Learned From Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The New Birth.

I. The History of Nicodemus (vv. 1, 2; Cf. 7:45-52; 19:38-42).

The lesson of today has its peculiar significance in the light of Nicodemus' station in life. He was a learned rabbi, a doctor of the law, and presumably a man of good character. His coming by night indicates his timidity. Like Joseph of Arimathea, he was afraid to openly espouse the cause of the new teacher of Galilee. Though timid, as an honest man he investigated and got first-hand information. Because of this information he uttered the brave words in the Sanhedrin against judging a man before hearing him (John 7:45-52), and he also rendered the loving service at the Lord's tomb (John 19:38-42).

II. Jesus' Discourse With Nicodemus (vv. 3-17).

The subject of this conversation was the new birth.

1. The Necessity of the New Birth (vv. 3-7).

It is not a matter of choice whether one is to be born again, but of necessity, if he is ever to see or enter the kingdom of God. Regeneration is the first demand the gospel of Christ makes upon man.

(1) The kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom, therefore there must be a spiritual birth in order to enter it (v. 3). As we enter the physical kingdom by a natural birth, so we enter the kingdom of God by a supernatural birth.

(2) The nature which we get through the natural birth is radical and essentially bad (v. 6; cf. Gal. 6:19-21). That which is born of the flesh is flesh. The flesh cannot be improved (Jer. 12:23); cultivate and educate it all you please and it will still remain flesh. In order to enter into the kingdom of heaven there must be a nature fitted for heaven. There is nothing that can be substituted for the new birth. Men today are trying to substitute morality and education for the new birth. Nicodemus possessed these, yet Christ declared that he needed something more. It is no more possible to have a physical being without a spiritual nature without being born of the spirit.

2. The Mystery of the New Birth (vv. 8-13).

Though mysterious, its results are definite. We cannot discern from whence the wind cometh, or whither it goeth, but we know that it blows by its effects. The fruits of our life demonstrate our nature, whether it is heavenly or carnal. We need not be told that we have had a physical birth, for our bodies with their various faculties prove it. Even so, the presence within us of a nature which has no affinity for the things of the world, but a strong affection for God and a disposition to yield prompt obedience to His commands, proves that we have been born from above.

3. The Ground Upon Which the New Birth Rests (vv. 14, 15).

Christ's atoning death on the cross makes regeneration possible. He took the place of sinners. His infinite merit was placed to their account; He suffered in the sinner's stead.

4. For Whom Salvation Was Provided (vv. 16, 17).

"Whosoever believeth on Him." These verses give in a condensed form the whole plan of salvation. Observe:

(1) Its source—"God so loved." (2) Its ground, the death of Christ—"He ever." (4) Its condition—"believeth on Him." Its results—"should not perish, have everlasting life."

III. Man's Attitude Toward Christ (vv. 18-21).

1. Some Believe and Are Saved.

Those who believe are now free from condemnation (John 5:24). They are not only saved now but forever (John 10:28, 29).

2. Some Will Not Believe and Are Therefore Resting Under the Condemnation of God.

The awful sin which causes men to be eternally lost is unbelief in Christ. The cause of their unbelief in Him is their love of sin. Refusal to come to Christ proves that men's deeds are evil and that they love darkness rather than light.

In God's Eternity

Look up, my wearied brother; see thy fellow-workmen there, in God's eternity; surviving there, they alone surviving; sacred band of the immortals, celestial bodyguard of the empire of mankind.—Carlyle.

The Honor

When one has come to seek the honor that comes from God only, he will take very quietly the withholding or the honor that comes from men.—George Macdonald.

The Static in Christianity

By REV. J. H. RALSTON, D. D.
Dean of the Correspondence School,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—But that which ye have already hold fast till I come.—Rev. 2:25.

The word "static" has been used by more than one prominent modernist in a derisive way as applying to what conservatives or evangelicals in the church hold—a static position, no movement forward. In considering Christianity several of its aspects are before us—its past, its present and its future. All that the church has today was given in the past. It now has a great deposit, and it has hopes for the future.

This derisive use of the word "static" is in connection with Christian truth. The charge is that the church will not look forward to new truth. Taking the derision out of the word, the statement is true. Christianity simply rests on what it has received and uses it not only for the present, but believes that its proper use will make the best provision for the future. Those who are now calling for new truth are not slow to say that they have an object, something they are driving at and it is nothing else than a revolution. They are determined to change the beliefs of men as to God, Jesus Christ, the Bible, sin, salvation and the things of the hereafter.

Now, what is the church to do with what has been given to it? While it may be admitted that it has had something given to its history and in its experience, what it has, has been given to it by revelation from God in the Bible. It is not difficult to get a comprehensive view of what it possesses.

Besides, the Bible has been the subject of interpretation for nearly two thousand years, and in the course of those centuries there has been a certain deposit of what may be called faith. Asking different bodies of Christians who hold that deposit for language in which to express it, it will be found that the language differs slightly, emphasis not being put at the same places. However, this difference is often sufficient to cause Christians to form different communions, thus accounting for the various historical denominations. But, take any one of a half-dozen of these formularies of belief, eliminate the few points of real difference between it and the others, and you will find that the residue of one will correspond quite accurately with that of every other and the essentials will include the supernatural being of God, the true deity of Jesus Christ, the supreme authority of the Bible, the new birth by regeneration of the Holy Spirit, the oneness of believers, the return of the Lord Jesus Christ, the resurrection of all men, the judgments, and eternal future rewards and punishments. The exhortation of our text is that we hold this great deposit fast.

The holding fast of that which has been received is not an easy task. In the first place those holding it should quite clearly know what they are holding. On the part of the evangelical portion of the truth a new study of the fundamentals of faith is demanded. Most of the confessions of the churches will splendidly repay new reading and study. Divinity schools should again return to the simple teaching of the Bible and confessional Christianity. Not only should evangelical Christians thus renew study, but preachers and teachers should put new emphasis on the great doctrines of faith.

Still further, holding these things means battle. Timothy and others of the first centuries were told that they should hold the faith, they must fight, and wage a good warfare. Shifting religious teachers engage the attention of but a small part of mankind, but when the Word of the Lord, which abideth forever, is given to the world the attention of men is arrested around the world and they are blessed.

In the material world men do not know what to do, change comes so frequently; the method today may be altogether out of date tomorrow. But as to the things of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ everything remains as it was, and what succeeded two thousand years ago will succeed today. One thing is stable, and changes not—"the Word of the Lord."

God Has So Willed

But as to the good things of this life, and its ills, God has willed that these things should be common to both the righteous and unrighteous, that we might not too easily covet the things which wicked men are seen equally to enjoy, nor shrink with an unseemly fear from the ills which even good men often suffer.—Augustine.

Whenever We Meet Him

What men have known of God is not in the books, but in the soul. What Jesus knew of God is not in the Gospel statement, nor did He ever intend that it should be. It was in Him; and we see it, feel it, know it, wherever and whenever we meet Him.—E. E. Haywood.

OAK LAWN

Robert Exter of the 8th grade is on the sick list and is missed in school. Clara Hosman also of the same grade is unable to be at the school being ill since the holidays. We hope to hear of her early recovery.

Jean McNickols of the second grade has also been on the sick list but is now back at school again.

Miss Skinner our librarian has bought a few new books for the lower grades. These will be added to the library.

The boys and girls clubs had their first rehearsal last week. Interest is manifested and we hope to put on something worth while.

Mrs. Behrends one of the mothers of the P. T. A., delighted the hearts of the little ones with a box of sweets.

Last Sunday was a red letter day for the Elmore subdivision at Oak Lawn when 20 lots were sold, Mayor John T. Emery proved a crackerjack of a salesman himself as he sold 14 of these lots.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Crooks and daughter Frances of Beverly Hills were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kreuger for New Year's dinner.

Mrs. John Scanlan was the guest of her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Scanlan for New Year's dinner.

Tuesday evening the Oak Lawn Community Club sponsored the picture "The Boy of Flanders" in which Jackie Coogan appears. The picture was shown at the Oak Lawn Public School. The children and their parents were invited. Nearly every child knows the story that the picture is based on and therefore made it a great deal more interesting. Miss Bernice Emery and Mr. John Mackay furnished the music, Miss Emery playing the piano, Mr. Mackay the saxophone. This was the Community Club's gift to the young children of Oak Lawn for Xmas. George Rinck had charge of running the picture.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Amelung of Chicago have been the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Peiper.

Mrs. John McPhail, mother of Mrs. A. Peiper has been seriously ill with appendicitis, but is improving slowly.

A bunco party will be held at St. Gerald's Catholic church next Wednesday evening Jan. 20. Every body invited.

Last Sunday morning the Holy Name Society of the St. Gerald Catholic church held an election of officers as follows: President, Joseph Ryan; Secretary and Treasurer, W. I. Landal. Following the election a breakfast was served by the ladies of the church to 35 guests.

Clean Electric Bulbs

The dry dust and dirt that accumulates on electric lamp bulbs and inside electric lighting fixtures often causes a decrease of illuminating value of 30 per cent within three months and where soot and oily dust are found the results are even worse. Therefore, all electric lamp bulbs and fixtures should be cleaned thoroughly and regularly.

Barber Philatelist

A London barber spends all his odd moments collecting stamps, and the walls of his shop are papered with stamps of all descriptions. He is also an art critic, his advice being sought when a person desires to purchase what is claimed to be a valuable picture.

Signaling by Drums

In South Africa messages are signaled by means of drums made of bark, the tapping on which can be heard many miles away. It is by this method that the defeat of Sir Redvers Buller at Colenso was made known to natives 60 miles distant in the space of two hours.

Thumb Not "Finger"

Strictly speaking, the thumb should not be referred to as a finger and we have on each hand four fingers and a thumb. The term that refers to all five of the divisions of the hand is digit. However, the word "finger" has come to be used loosely in reference to the four digits and the thumb.
